

CONGER Named Citrix Technology Professional

ALPHARETTA, GA, 13 May 2008— Xcentric, LLC applauds Jason Conger for his recent induction into the Citrix Technology Professional (CTP) Program. Conger is one of twenty-two individuals worldwide to receive this honor. Through this program, Citrix seeks to recognize individuals for their dedication to Citrix and also create a collaborative environment for expert feedback.

Collectively these individuals provide unparalleled expertise and practical insight into Citrix solutions and openly share their knowledge with others through personal websites, publications, discussion forums, and speaking engagements.

Prior to joining Xcentric, as Hosted Services Architect, Conger worked at Citrix as a Presentation Server Architect, assisting them in the design and implementation of their products. He has designed and built both large and small Citrix environments ranging from a few users to thousands of users. He also maintains a website with various Citrix-related resources at www.jasonconger.com.

“Having someone of Conger’s caliber at Xcentric is a great asset to the team and to our clients,” said Mike Walter, Director of Professional Services of Xcentric. “He is a driving factor in the development, maintenance, and success of Gray Matter, Xcentric’s Hosted Solution. This is quite an accomplishment, and we want to join in congratulating him for this well-deserved honor.”
